A Startling Confession

It is Said Curtis Admitted

The Heath Case Develops a Sensation—A

A Woman Horribly Murdered by Indians.

By Telegram from the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 10.—The Post prints a sensational story, giving the details of a confession alleged to have been made by M. B. Curtis, the actor, known as "Sam'l O' Posen," who was acquitted here a few months ago of the murder of Policeman Grant.

The lawyer who defended Curtis, says that he shot the policeman after the latter had placed him under arrest for being drunk and disorderly. This was the theory set up by the prosecution, though Curtis succeeded, after the second trial, in securing a verdict of acquittal. When the charges of bribery were made Curtis hurriedly

Later—Attorney H. I. Kowalsky denies that he ever told the police that

M. B. Curtis had confessed to him that he had murdered Policeman Grant.

Chief Cawley and Detective Lees assert on the contrary that Kowalsky did tell them of Curtis's confession and the question now is one of veracity between the three men. As Curtis has been acquitted of the crime nothing further can be done to him, even if the story is true.

A GORY SPECTACLE.

An Old Lady Found Dead With Her Head in a Bucket.

CARSON (Nev.), March 10.—Wednesday night of Thursday morning Mrs.

Eggleston, aged 66 years, was horribly murdered in Antelope Valley, half a mile from Colville, Mono county, Cal.

Thursday afternoon a lady called to visit Mrs. Eggleston. After knocking and receiving no answer she walked in and found a horrible scene. She alarmed the neighbors and the Coroner was summoned, but he did not arrive until twenty minutes later.

The Coroner found the body of the murdered woman lying over the edge of the wood-box with her head stuffed in a five-pound lard bucket. The skull was crushed in and there were a dozen gashes in the head, neck and face. The room was spattered with blood and presented a gory spectacle.

A bottle half-filled with whiskey was found on the table, and as Indians had been seen about the house it is thought that they came into the house and were given food, and after getting the whole of the money and became drunk and committed the deed.

Nothing was taken from the house,

so the crime was evidently not committed by robbers. The remains were brought to Carson last night by H.

M. Schoolay, a brother of the deceased.

MRS. McWHIRTER'S SUSPICIONS.

Heath a Tool of Judge Harris and Reel

FRESNO, March 10.—Quite a sensation occurred here in the death trial today

when Lawyer Foote was questioning

Mrs. McWhirter, widow of L. B. Mc-

Whirter, the man whom the law has charged with murdering Foote asked

Mrs. McWhirter whom she meant when she said: "Why did they do it, re-fering to her exclamation at the time of the killing of her husband, Mrs.

McWhirter said she meant "Judge

Harris and Reel Terry."

This statement was followed up by Attorney Johnson, for the prosecution, until Mrs. McWhirter admitted that crashing to the bottom, forty feet below.

Lonsdale kept his seat until the horse struck the bottom. Lonsdale companion, who witnessed the affair, immediately went for aid. The boy was drawn out of the well, and said he was not hurt in the least. A rigging was put over the well and the horse was drawn out, and to the astonishment of everybody present, only received a few scratches on the front legs.

GERMAN POLITICS.

The Treaty Discussion Rouses Rumor.

A Preliminary Division Shows a Government Majority.

The Silver Conference to Resume Hearings Monday.

Starting Abuses in Relation to the Slave Traffic—Ambassador Runyon Tenders Uncle Sam's Acknowledgments—Imperial Court Smashed.

By Telegram from the Associated Press.
BERLIN, March 10.—(By Atlantic Cable, Associated Press copyright, 1894.) The approach of the critical point in the discussion of the Russo-German commercial treaty has brought to the surface the usual crop of rumors with regard to dissensions among the ministers and which may be summarized briefly by saying that rumor has it that Chancellor von Caprivi, Dr. Miquel and Dr. von Boetticher are contemplating resigning. As to von Boetticher it is believed he is ready to exchange his post for a ministerial position. Koscielski, leader of the Polish party in the Reichstag, has resigned his seat because the Poles have decided to support the Russo-German treaty.

Caprivi has asked the Minister of Justice to draft a bill providing for the punishment of Germans abroad who engage in slave trade. Recent investigation has revealed startling abuses upon the part of German colonists and has shown that the penal code is not sufficient to reach these men.

The Silver Commission will resume its sittings Monday. The bimetallics have announced their intention of moving that the power of delegating to a foreign international monetary conference with or without the participation of England. Two fresh suggestions for raising the price of silver will be submitted to the commission next week. It is proposed that all countries maintain free coinage and that the price of silver be fixed by new coinage at the ratio of 24 to 1. The other plan provides for the cooperation of important States, including such countries as Mexico and the United States, on the basis of 21 to 1.

It is understood that the Hamburg and Bremen steamship lines will follow the example of the government, and press and warn the public against agents of the Illinois Central Railroad who have been sent to recruit immigrants for the Mississippi Valley. The German newspapers declare that emigration to any part of the world is highly injudicious at the present moment.

United States Ambassador Runyon has expressed to the Imperial government, on behalf of President Cleveland, the acknowledgments of the government and people of the United States for the extension of the German Empire at the World's Fair.

In the Reichstag, during the debate on the Russo-German treaty, Caprivi announced that the National Assembly would vote for the treaty, although they had doubts as to the advisability of the provisions dealing with immigration and settlements, and asked for their explanations with regard to a sliding scale of railroad rates.

Chancellor von Caprivi replied that the government proposed to suspend the sliding scale during the whole duration of the treaty, but the government was not able to give a binding pledge to that effect. After a noisy debate, division took place. The majority included both sections of the Freisinnige, the Social Democrats, the Progressives, the National Liberals, the Conservatives, the Imperialists, the Conservatives, the Imperial Liberals, and the anti-Imperialists. The division was in the ratio of 181 to 119.

While driving on Unter den Linden this afternoon, the carriage containing Emperor William, three of his sons and a lady of the court, and a cart, the side of the Imperial carriage was completely smashed, but the occupants were uninjured.

A DEADLY AFFRAY.

Mexican Brigands Attack a Hacienda but are Repulsed.
DURANGO, Mexico, March 10.—The stock-ranch of Piero W. Sanchez, fifty miles west of here, was the scene of a desperate affray yesterday between a band of brigands and a force of employees led by Mr. Sanchez, who made a strong resistance against the brigands. The outlaws were expected, and when they rode up to the main residence of the ranch, they demanded money, the guards opened fire.

The robbers were taken completely by surprise and two were killed, but the remainder rallied and returned the fire, killing three of the ranch hands and wounding three others. The fight was kept up for three hours, and finally resulted in the bandits being driven off, leaving four killed and five wounded.

LONDON, March 10.—(By Atlantic Cable.) The marriage of Miss Virginia Bonyne, stepdaughter of Charles W. Bonyne, of California, to Viscount Deveraux, eldest son of the Earl of Coventry, was solemnized this afternoon in All Saints Church with great pomp.

The church was crowded by a representative and brilliant assemblage, including Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, many of the American colony and representatives of English aristocracy. The presents were many and costly.

WHEAT AND CORN.

Estimates Up to March 1 Show a Large Decrease from 1893.
WASHINGTON, March 10.—The statistical returns of the Department of Agriculture for March consist principally of estimates of the distribution of wheat and corn and the counts remaining in the farmers' hands. The returns indicate that the stock of wheat in the farmers' hands is 114,000,000 bushels, or 28.8 per cent. of the volume of the crop of 1893. This is nearly 21,000,000 bushels less than the estimate for March 1 of last year, and nearly 20,000,000 less than the average for the past eight years.

The amount remaining in farmers' hands in eleven principal wheat-growing States is 72,000,000 bushels or 63.8 per cent. of the volume of the crop. The amount in the hands of the producers in the country at large. The average weight of the crop of 1893, per measured bushel, is calculated at a little over 31.500,000 commercial bushels, against 30,000,000 measured bushels as heretofore reported.

The corn in the producers' hands, it is estimated, aggregates 531,000,000 bushels, or 36.4 per cent. of the crop of 1893. The proportion is less than in any year in the past five, except the year 1891. The aggregate corn in the farmers' hands in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska is 111 per cent. of the total in the farmers' hands in the entire country, being 360,000,000 bushels.

The official and commercial estimates of the wheat crop of 1893 make it 32,000,000 bushels less than last year. Final estimates will probably still further reduce the total for 1893, as the preliminary estimates of Russia and Germany are greatly reduced by the final estimates.

The game was for charity and the Children's Hospital and San Francisco Polytechnic will profit handsomely by the receipts. The Zingares were defeated.

POISON.

Dramatic Episode in Which a Mother Follows Her Daughter to the Grave.

POMEROY (O.), March 10.—Mrs. Thomas M. Holmes, who took a large dose of extract of colchicum to prove that she had not poisoned her daughter, died last night. The daughter died from poison and the mother was accused of having administered the fatal dose. She denied the charge and, to demonstrate her innocence, took two spoonfuls of colchicum with the above result. She believed now that poison was placed in the medicine by an unknown person.

It was a dramatic scene. In the best of health she called the rest of the family and several neighbors into the sitting-room, after the funeral of her daughter, to witness her swallow two spoonfuls of the stuff. "The town gossip accuse me," she said, "of killing my daughter with this. She took one spoonful. I'll take two. You are all witness to this dose. 'See if it kills me.' Forty-eight hours later she was in the agonies of death and survived but a short time, dying in the grand jury and five prisoners were dismissed.

SHE CARRIED ARMS.

The Natalie is Seized by Hayti.

President Hippolyte Orders the Crew Killed.

The Mutilations Were Said to Be for His Enemies.

The Yessel Was Intercepted Off the Bahamas by a Gunboat—She Was Commanded by Antonio Salina and Was Manned by Foreigners.

By Telegram from the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, March 10.—The World's Kingston (Jamaica) special says that a cable dispatch from Port au Prince, Hayti, announces that the steam-ship Natalie, whose steamer sailing from the United States aroused suspicion, has been captured by the Haytian warships Desallies and Capois.

The Natalie was intercepted off Fortune Island of the Bahama group and arms and ammunition being found on board she was seized upon information that the mutilations of war were intended for the Haytian revolutionists. The entire crew were shot by order of President Hippolyte.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.
NEW YORK, March 10.—Reports received here confirm the report of the capture of the Natalie by Hayti, and the execution of her crew. A few days ago the Natalie was discovered by a passing vessel anchored off Fortune Island about four hundred miles north of Hayti and a Haytian gunboat was anchored in close proximity to her. It is learned that President Hippolyte had expressed a determination that the Natalie's cargo of arms and ammunition should not fall into the hands of his enemies and had given orders that, in case she should attempt to leave Fortune Island, she must be seized by the Haytian gunboat which had been on the lookout for her some time before her arrival at Fortune Island. The Natalie was very small, being only twenty-nine tons burden. It is said that she was commanded by Antonio Salina, who has been identified for years with the enemies of the Haytian republic.

The Natalie fitted out at Savannah, Ga., and it is supposed her cargo of arms was intended for Brazil through her commander, Capt. Salina, said she belonged to a private party who was going to Florida to hunt for diamonds. On January 13, twenty-five or 100 packages were delivered on board the yacht. These contained arms, among them two Hotchkiss guns, a large number of army rifles and a quantity of ammunition. The cargo was taken from building stores John Calcutt, who was from France, and almost all of his crew were foreigners.

ROUGH WEATHER.

Snow in Minnesota—Sandstorms in Nebraska and Elsewhere.

CHICAGO, March 10.—A severe wind storm struck the city tonight, blowing at the rate of sixty miles an hour. Many street signs and other loose articles were blown down, and a cornice from the building struck John Calcutt, inflicting fatal wounds from which he died.

MCCOOK (Neb.), March 10.—One of the most severe sandstorms ever experienced in Nebraska swept over the central and western parts of the State today. From 10 o'clock until 2:30 this afternoon the wind blew with great force and the dust was so thick that one could not see a block away. Considerable damage was done to the outbuildings and fences.

HUGO (Neb.), March 10.—There was a furious sandstorm this afternoon. The Catholic church here was blown from its foundation by the gale of today, and considerable damage was done to the building.

ST. PAUL (Minn.), March 10.—It has been snowing hard since early this evening, accompanied by high winds. Reports show that the storm is general throughout the State and North and South Dakota.

BLUEFIELDS.

Inhabitants Opposed to Nicaragua's Action—An American Dies.

NEW YORK, March 10.—The steamer Premier arrived from Bluefields and brings the intelligence that a large number of the inhabitants are leaving because Nicaragua has taken possession of that place and the adjacent country, which heretofore belonged to the Mosquito reservation. The Premier sailed previous to the landing of troops from the British man-of-war Cleopatra.

CHICAGO, March 10.—Dr. C. E. Rogers of Minneapolis, en route to Bluefields, where he has large interests, he says: "England did the right thing in landing troops on the reservation, and they should show the Mosquitoes to see it done. The reason the Mosquitoes were sent there is because Nicaragua violated the treaty of 1860, which provided for the autonomy of the Mosquito reservation. The United States gave tacit consent to that arrangement."

BAD BUSINESS.

The Failure of a Cedar Rapids Firm Involves a Boston House.

CEDAR RAPIDS (Iowa), March 10.—Mr. Morin & Co., extensive egg dealers and owners of six creameries, near here, have failed. A local bank secured attachment. The firm recently lost $200,000 by damage to eggs in storage.

BOSTON, March 10.—Morse, Smith & Co., produce merchants, assigned to day with liabilities at $200,000. The firm is involved in the failure of J. R. Morin & Co. of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, who were Western agents for the Boston firm. Mr. Smith said: "We were forced to the wall through carrying the Morin company, who did business at a loss of $100,000 for the last year."

Joubert, has issued a manifesto protesting against the Rhodesian republic to help Cecil Rhodes' Premier of gold mine and chairman of the British South Africa Company, extend British sway over the whole of South Africa. The manifesto was called forth by the fact that many burgers of the Transvaal left to take claims in Mafeking.

MURDEROUS NEW RIFLE.

The Weapon's Long Range Renders the Hospital Corps Almost Useless.

In an experiment with the new and terrible rifle with which the European armies are to be equipped, a man was recently shot accidentally, says the New York Sun. "He was nearly half a mile from the gun, and one of the bullets passed into his body. One of the rifle was struck by the bullet, and the missile exploded. When the post-mortem examination was held it was found that the bullet had split into fourteen pieces, which had penetrated the man's body in as many different directions. It would have been impossible for surgical skill to have accomplished any relief if the bullet had not instantly, and the different parts of the bullet could not have been probed for from the exterior of the body. This was the rifle which was used in the battle of the Marston, and it was found that the bullet from a quarter of a mile just now the European authorities, having become satisfied as to the murderous execution of the rifle, have fallen into a consideration of the danger to the hospital corps. It is generally understood that the new German rifle will have a range of nearly two miles. In previous wars the hospital corps has moved perhaps an eighth of a mile in the rear of the line, and the men were wounded there and carried back and placed in the hands of the medical authorities. It is now, however, and all that humanity could do was done in their behalf. The hospital corps in this instance was out of range of the enemy, and could not successfully. The question now is where can the surgeons be placed safely from danger of the new rifles? It is suggested that it is impracticable to carry the wounded a mile and a half back of the line, and if the forces approach within half a mile of the enemy, the whole question resolves itself into a discussion upon the terrible results which must attend the next meeting of the forces in Europe, armed with the new rifles."

JUMPED A FROG.

The S. P. Passenger Train Accident.

Went Off the Track on San Fernando Street.

The Rate Troubles are Being Patched Up.

The Southern Pacific and Santa Fe to Combine Against the Union Pacific—General and Personal.

Southern Pacific passenger train No. 18, which left the Arcade Depot at 2 o'clock p.m., yesterday, bound for San Francisco, and consisting of eight cars drawn by two engines, narrowly escaped being wrecked just before it reached the San Fernando-street station of the company, two miles from the starting point. As the train was running at presumably the ordinary rate of speed beneath the Downey-avenue viaduct, the forward engine plunged from the rails and began plowing up the cinder-packed surface of the yards, taking the second engine with it, followed by the baggage and express cars. The one coach and five Pullman sleepers remained on the track, but the shock of the final stop brought a good many of their occupants up with a jerk that caused quite a panic among them. None of the derailed cars tipped over, and no one was hurt. The fact that the ground at that point is so soft and level made the derailee slight, but the locomotives lost their "cow-catchers" and were otherwise "bowed." The second engine and its tender came near telescoping, but the two seemed inclined to go in different directions. The cause of the derailment is not known positively, but it is charged with new jumping-frog work, which has been put into position in the track near the northern end of the viaduct. One train, No. 17, had crossed the frog safely, coming in, and No. 18, the next train out, was evidently derailed by a wheel of the engine striking some projection and riding the rail. A switch engine attached to the train took the cars around by another track, the two derailed cars were pulled on, an engine that fortunately was in the roundhouse with the engine put in service and, thus made up, the train proceeded on its way, only a little over an hour and a half late. Nearly the whole of the afternoon was taken by a large force of workmen engaged in putting the derailed locomotives back on the track, and running them into the roundhouse where the rails that had been derailed.

A $25,000 WRECK.

The wreck of two freight trains on the Southern Pacific road, at Sansevier, near Colton, Friday morning, resulted in the loss of property valued at $25,000. More serious than appeared from first accounts. No injuries were sustained beyond the slight bruise on the head of one engineer, but the wreck was nearly as serious as that of the freight train, which was derailed by a large force of workmen engaged in putting the derailed locomotives back on the track, and running them into the roundhouse where the rails that had been derailed.

HE GOES ARMED.

"Dr." Perkins and His Little Gun.

An Amusing Scene in Department One Yesterday.

Al Coblentz Released Upon Furnishing $3000 Bond.

Sureties Who Guarantee the Appearance of the Accused Embellisher—A Copy of One of the Indictments—Court Notes.

Facts as to the prime cause of the difficulty between J. P. Knox and J. H. Perkins, which resulted in the shooting affray at Moneta, on the morning of January 5 last, were ventilated in Department One yesterday, in the course of the testimony taken on the assault to murder charge preferred by Perkins against Knox.

The courtroom was well-filled with people from out of town, who gathered to hear the details of the crime in which their two neighbors or friends figured as the principals.

Perkins, who is known to his acquaintances as "Doc," proved that his 74 years had neither diminished his energy nor blurred his senses, by his rapid movements and quick answers. The venerable gentleman wore his coat and vest unbuttoned, and presented an inspiring spectacle, as well as affording amusement for the spectators by numerous side remarks made while on the witness stand. He looked like a resolute man, and when Mr. Stephens cautiously inquired of him the examination whether or not he was in the habit of going armed, he replied very placidly: "Oh, yes, I've got a gun on me now," at the same time reaching for his hip-pocket. The jurymen at once began to shrink in their seats and there was a marked disposition manifest on the part of those seated about the witness stand to obtain positions of shelter in case of accident.

Mr. Stephens regained his voice shortly and asked the court to have the gun taken away from Mr. Perkins, which direction was given. When the deputy sheriff stepped forward, somewhat gingerly, to receive the weapon, Perkins graciously handed it to him with a smiling "yours truly." The agitation immediately subsided and the case was proceeded with without further interruption.

The story of the shooting, as told heretofore in this time, and was substantiated by witnesses yesterday in behalf of the prosecution, is about as follows:

Knox had once been employed by Perkins in some capacity at the latter's home place at Moneta. He had some difficulty about a settlement, and called several times on Perkins to collect what he claimed was due him. It was while on one of these visits to Perkins's house on January 5 that the trouble ensued. Knox made a demand on Perkins for money, and, being ordered off the premises, became angry. Some of the witnesses swore that they saw him raise his finger and shake it at his former employer saying, "I'll kill you 'Doc'." At any rate, he did go and borrow a shotgun, which he loaded and brought back to Perkins's house.

A relative of the old man saw Knox coming down the road and informed Perkins of this fact, when the latter at once seized a rifle and hurried to the door to meet Knox. He carried the rifle in his right hand, and started to open the door with his left just as he was in the act of emerging from the house, and before he had time to raise the rifle, Knox fired twice, hitting him in the left side. Perkins did manage to take a shot at Knox while the latter was running away but he failed to aim accurately, the bullet going wide of its mark.

Knox then returned the borrowed gun to its owner and went to Redondo, where he gave himself up to a deputy sheriff.

All the evidence for the people was not in last evening, the case being continued until Monday.

COBLIN'S BAIL.
Al Coblentz, charged with embezzlement, who was arrested on indictments found by the grand jury, Friday afternoon, furnished bail yesterday and was released from custody. Six indictments were found against Coblentz, each of which charged him with having appropriated certain money while acting in the capacity of Deputy County Assessor. The total amount of the alleged embezzlement is $153, that being the aggregate named.

Coblentz spent Friday night in the County Jail, where he steadily refused to talk about the matter. Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Edwards B. de Bronz and John Foster appeared in Department One and announced that as their intention to give bond for the release of Coblentz, and the papers were accordingly prepared. The sureties bound themselves to stand liable for $3000, in case the defendant failed to appear when wanted, and, the bond seeming sufficient, Judge Smith affixed his signature in approval of the same and an order of release was issued.

The indictments, as before noted, are six in number and identical in general form. The following is a copy of one of them:

"The grand jury of Los Angeles county, in the name and by the authority of the people of the State of California, accuse Al Coblentz of the crime of embezzlement, committed as follows: Hereofore, to-wit, on the 15th day of May, 1893, and at all times herein mentioned, in the county of Los Angeles and State aforesaid, the said Al Coblentz was duly qualified and acting as Deputy County Assessor, under J. Edward Gray, who was then and there duly qualified and acting as assessor of Los Angeles county, and as such Deputy County Assessor, the said Al Coblentz then and there had in his possession and under his control, by virtue of his trust, and as such Deputy Assessor, the sum of $38 lawful money of the United States, public funds of the said county of Los Angeles, which said money the said Al Coblentz and heretofore received for the use and benefit of said county of Los Angeles, from Leopold Goldsmith, and having said money in his possession and control, as aforesaid, fraudulently and feloniously, and contrary to the due and lawful execution of his said trust, appropriated the same to his own use, and concealed the same, with fraudulent intent, to convert the same to his own use, and concealed the same with fraudulent intent to convert the same to his own use."

DOG VS. PONY.

The Match Race at Athletic Park Yesterday Afternoon.

Virtually a Walk-over for the Pony in Straight Heats—A One-sided Cricket Match—Los Angeles Not in It.

There was a fair attendance at Athletic Park yesterday afternoon, the double attraction being the match game of cricket between the Los Angeles and Bakersfield teams, and the race between the famous trotting dog Doc and the pony Nat, owned by George S. Wicker of this city.

The cricket game was first disposed of, and was rather a tame affair, being altogether too one-sided for the inexperienced spectator to get any fun out of it, even the good points of the play, and there were quite a number, being lost sight of in the general impatience to see the race which was the event of the day.

The game was virtually a "snap" for the visitors, who were in every way the superior players, winning the game easily with an inning and eighty runs to spare. The chief features were the bowling of Stratton and Craig for Bakersfield, the batting of Richardson, who made a score of 57 runs for the visitors, and that of Moon for Los Angeles, he making 28 runs in the second inning, and being still at bat when the side was retired.

W. J. Camidge umpired for the Northern players, while G. L. Waring looked after the interests of the home team. The final score was as follows: Los Angeles, 15, 31; Bakersfield, 131.—The visitors did not claim their half of the second innings.

The real event of the afternoon, however, and the one on which was centered the undivided interest of the large audience was the dog-and-pony race. Doc, the canine trotter, is a fine specimen of the Irish setter, and is owned by Willie Ketchum of Brighton, Ontario, who travels about making matches of this kind, in the majority of cases winning first place and all the honors. Doc is now nearly 7 years old, and has been trotting for about six years, during which time he has won purses amounting to $1800 and numerous other prizes for his fast owner and driver. He is raced in a miniature sulky, fitted with pneumatic tires, and which with its harness weighs twenty pounds. He was driven yesterday by Fred Vingling, a dwarf, who, though 19 years old, stands but 42 inches high and weighs 40 pounds.

The pony against which he was matched was one of the largest against which he has ever raced, in fact, Mr. Ketchum who accompanies his son as financial backer and manager, refuses to put up a money purse in a race against any horse more than twelve hands high. Nat is a thirteen-hand pony, whose dam was the well-known Shetland, Minnie Warren, and his sire a standard-bred trotter of the famous Hambletonian stock, the speedy Commodore Belmont. The pedigree of Nat is in itself a guarantee of his speed, but he is too well known in Los Angeles to need any such recommendation.

He proved too much for poor Doc, and the latter evidently felt his humiliation keenly, for as he crossed the line at the end of the first half-mile heat thirty-five yards behind the pony, he could almost read his disgust and mortification upon his bright, intelligent face.

In the second heat he did somewhat better, only ten yards interval appearing between the two sulks at the finish.

The dog trotted fairly and squarely throughout, while the pony was evidently inconvenienced not a little by the bank at either end of the oval circuit and broke several times. There was no official time taken, but several stop-watches at the grandstand made the time of the second and best heat at 1:47 for the dog and 1:44 for the pony. Dr. R. T. Whittlesey officiated as starter and judge to the satisfaction of all concerned.

After the race Willie Ketchum himself raced his dog a half-mile against time and made the distance in 1:35 1/2, which was quite remarkable, especially in view of the fact that Master Ketchum weighs over eighty pounds, making the total weight drawn by Doc more than one hundred pounds, nearly twice his own weight of fifty-one pounds.

SOCIETY

A novel and beautiful affair was held yesterday afternoon and evening at the residence of Mrs. Charles Ellis, corner of Twenty-third and Scarf streets. It was the butterfly tea given for the benefit of the Association, a charitable organization, composed principally of the society women of the city. The league was organized several months ago, without any capital, money being raised by holding meetings among the ladies and levying assessments of small amounts. The league reaches a certain class of people that seldom comes under the notice of any of the other charitable organizations, with the exception of the Associated Charities. When a case is reported it is carefully investigated, and the worthy provided with food and clothes and work, if necessary. By degrees the field of the organization widened, and it was deemed advisable to replenish the treasury that future calls would not leave it without funds. Accordingly, the attractive butterfly tea was decided upon. The various participants have been busily engaged for the last few weeks, and the dainty frivolities of many-hued paper in the designs of butterflies were the result.

In the large grounds about the house were placed many-colored Japanese lanterns, which were lighted in the evening. The reception began at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and continued until after 10. The afternoon reception was attended almost entirely by ladies, but at night the gentlemen turned out in numbers, and the house was crowded until the close of the affair.

Three rooms were used, in which were the five various booths or tables, the rest of the lower floor being crowded open. In the drawing-room, to the left of the entrance, were the tables where coffee and Russian tea were served. The first of these was the red-and-white booth, presided over by Mrs. Oso W. Childs. The design was one of the most original of the tables, being a green moth red and white butterfly with golden antennae, on each one resting a silver candelabra with lighted candles covered with dainty red fairy shades.

The table was further decorated with vases of poinsettia and red carnations, and handsome silverware containing bonbons. At the side was a red-and-white banquet-lamp, on it being placed a red shade covered with paper poppies, which was greatly admired. At the back of the booth was a little table, on which numerous mirrors were placed, half hidden by potted plants. Over the booth was a half canopy of white netting covered with butterflies.

Childs, in a gown of ivory satin, white chiffon and crimson velvet, with diamond ornaments, presided at the coffee urn. She was assisted by the following ladies in pretty red and white gowns: Mrs. Shoemaker, Misses Roberts, Banning and Reese. Ellis, Miss Alden also assisted in a handsome gown of white silk. The Russian tea booth was in the same room. The decorations were of white and black, with a large number of black and white varieties of butterflies and ragnettes. Over the table was a canopy of yellow paper, on which were being intertwined throughout the booth.

Mrs. Fred D. Griffith was in charge. She wore a becoming gown of black and yellow, and was assisted by Miss E. Uley, Frances Thomas, F. K. Alinsworth and Miss Wedemeyer. By the side of the music-room was the red and black booth, where Russian tea was also served. The table was decorated with a red Chino-silk cover, on which rested a handsome wrought-iron banquet-lamp, ornamented with a red shade. Above the table extended a black net, to which were attached paper butterflies. It was in charge of Mrs. George A. Mead, in a gown of black silk, trimmed with oriental embroidery. She was assisted by Mrs. Theodore Burnett, Misses Braly, Corson and Kimble.

Over in an adjoining corner was the lavender booth. It was decorated in lavender and green and was most effective. The table was covered with lavender crepe paper and sprinkled with maiden-hair fern and violets. In the nooks and corners were bamboo which was covered with myriads of butterflies. Mrs. Joe Cook, in lavender crepe and violets, and Mrs. Earl, in a green and lavender costume, were in charge, assisted by Mrs. Bancroft, Misses Elderkin, Fuller and Helen Fier.

The chocolate table was situated in a room adjoining the music-room. The decorations were of pink. On the table were four silver candelabra, with rose-pink shades. The appointments were of pink. Along the walls extended a tennis net covered with pink butterflies. Banquet and piano lamps with pink shades, shed a soft light about the room. A basket of peach-blossoms on the mantel was especially admired. Mrs. Theo. Carlos Jones, in pink ottoman silk, with bertha of duchesse lace and handsome diamond ornaments, Mrs. John Voeburg, in changeable blue and white, Mrs. F. Sartori, in pink chiffon and green velvet, were in charge. They were assisted by Misses Mullins, Anna Mullins, Dorsey, Dorey, and Misses Easton. With every cup of tea, coffee or chocolate a souvenir in the form of a paper butterfly was presented. In addition to this dainty of dainties, trifles were sold outright, and so greatly were they in favor that at the conclusion of the affair scarcely one remained. Quite a gratifying result was realized and the tea will probably be the initiative of a series of similar entertainments to be given during the season.

SIR WALTER SCOTT EVENING. Friday evening was the occasion of a very enjoyable "Sir Walter Scott evening" at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Moll of Edgemont. The programme consisted of quotations and recitations from Sir Walter Scott, interspersed with music.

Mr. Mills, a gentleman from Scotland, who has recently located in this city, recited Scott's poem, "My Native Land," in a very pleasing manner. Mrs. Rice of Prospect Park and Miss Jeanie Irwin of Edgemont, also favored the company with a guitar solo, both of which were highly appreciated. Miss Rice sang "Mary of Argyle." The duets by Miss Jeanie Irwin and Miss Maude Little, with Mrs. Moll as accompanist, were very enjoyable.

The biography of Sir Walter Scott was prepared by Miss Agnes Whetzel, and read by Miss Maude Little. There was also a select reading by a young lady of the Waverley Club of Hollywood, and "Locksley" was read by James Reinhardt.

Recitations were given by Miss Lydia Erb and Percy Allen. By request Miss Madge Stephens sang "Comin' Thro' the Rye." About 11 o'clock light refreshments were served.

Danziger, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin, Mr. and Mrs. Bromberger, Mrs. Berns and Mrs. Foster, Messrs. Meyer, Seigel, L. Blumenthal, A. Mendelson, E. P. Denan, Misses Minnie Newman, M. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Forrester were the successful winners of the first prize, while Dr. Davidson and Mrs. R. Bridge carried off the consolation. Those present were, Mr. and Mrs. Bridge, R. Bridge, F. Smith, D. G. Peck, R. S. Crombie, W. Smith, Charles Forrester, Blackstone H. Sale, Dr. Davidson, Misses Carlin and Cole.

ELYSIAN CLUB ENTERTAINMENT. The Elysian Club held its regular monthly meeting at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Knight, on College street, last Monday evening. The attendance was unusually large and the programme exceedingly interesting.

The principal feature of the programme, and was ably rendered by Mrs. Goss, Mrs. Friel, Master Friel, Mrs. Le Deux and others. In the form of twenty weighty and vital questions pertaining to the events of the day, propounded by Mrs. Steere. The answers to these questions led to much deep thought, and many spirited discussions until the lateness of the hour necessitated the president, Mrs. Goss, to call the club to order for adjournment. A vote of thanks was tendered to Mrs. Steere by the club for these questions, whereby much thought was aroused among its members.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Knight, Mr. Knight, Jr., Miss Knight, Mr. and Mrs. Hanley, Miss Hanley, Mr. and Mrs. Gould, Mrs. McCaffery, Mrs. White, Mr. and Mrs. Cole, Mr. and Mrs. Langley, Mr. and Mrs. Steere, Mrs. Le Deux, Mrs. and Miss Meanes, Mrs. and Miss Friel, Master Friel, and others.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS. On Friday and Saturday evenings of next week Gilbert & Sullivan's charming opera, "Patience," will be given at the Los Angeles Theater, under the direction of the well-known operatic manager and singer, C. M. Pyke. Mr. Pyke has surrounded himself with the best vocal talent in this city, both in principals and chorus. The charming and bright little artist, Louise Manfred Pyke, will also appear on this occasion, so that a most satisfactory performance of the opera may be looked for.

MRS. BLOODGOOD IN NEW YORK. A recent Musical Courier of New York publishes the following regarding Mrs. Bloodgood, who last year sang at St. John's Episcopal Church of this city: "Mrs. Bloodgood returns from San Francisco, where she has been living for some years. I well remember hearing her sing at the Madison-avenue Baptist Church, for such a voice is not easily forgotten. Such a contralto voice is a veritable joy here, where there are so many mezzo-soprano and so few real contraltos."

Mr. Bloodgood has gone into business in New York City, and his wife is a pianist in the Waldorf-Astoria. It will be noticed that San Francisco is credited with having been the former residence of Mrs. Bloodgood, which is interesting, as it usually gets credit for everything good that comes from California. In reality Mrs. Bloodgood resided in San Diego and also in this city.

SETH ABBOTT RECEPTION. Seth Abbott will be tendered a reception at the Argyle, corner of Olive and Second streets tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock, the occasion being his seventy-seventh birthday. Gov. The choir of Christ Church will give a rendition of Stainer's "Credulity" on Good Friday evening at 7:45 o'clock. The double quartette will be supplied by a chorus in the body of the church. A general invitation is extended.

The Student Players, a dramatic organization, will give an open meeting Monday evening, March 19, at Steverson Taylor's Music Hall. Dress rehearsal takes place next Monday evening. SHARPS AND FLATS. The Musical Society of Warsaw have erected a twelve-foot high obelisk in honor of Frederick Chopin, the famous composer. The obelisk is surmounted by a bronze bust of the great composer of pinaforte music, bearing the inscription, "Feb. 1, 1809, to Frederick Chopin." There have been many disputes as to the real birthday of Chopin, but the majority approve of the date above given.

A musical festival under the patronage of the King of Wurtemberg, will take place at Stuttgart June 2 to 4. Prince Hermann of Saxe-Weimar is at the head of the committee of arrangements. Capellmeister, who will be director. Anton Rubinstein, Cesar Thompson, Schidmannel, Mrs. Klafsky, etc., are engaged.

An examination of the effects left by the composer, Tschalkowsky, show that he had commenced work on an opera on a subject of "Romeo and Juliet," a subject which is authoritatively said to be now engaging the attention of Verdi. Tschalkowsky also left finished and ready for production a new ballet in two acts and a number of valuable fragments.

Baron Perfall, director of the Royal Musical Academy in Munich, attained his seventieth birthday on January 30. His opera, "Junker Heinz," in a revised form, was produced on the occasion.

Rubinstein, has often expressed his desire to retire from the profession of a pianist, but he has not been understood at the request of the Czar agreed to give some recitals at St. Petersburg this month. At one recital he was possibly helped by Mrs. Sotie Menter.

The Belgian composer, Adolph Samuel, director of the Ghent Conservatory, has completed a symphony with chorus named "Le Christ Mort." The death is announced of Mrs. Travinski, who, till a year ago, was organist of St. Stephen's Church, Chicago. She was in her ninety-fourth year.

Emma Juch has been engaged as soloist for the last New York Philharmonic concert, April 6 and 7. If orchestral parts can be attained she will sing an aria from Weber's "Silvana," which has never been sung in this country.

While Beethoven's symphonies have long been included in the repertoire of the Leipzig Gewandhaus subscription concerts, his "Missa Solemnis" received its first complete performance only in the last week of January.

The prolific Leoncavallo is writing the text and music for a comic opera, "Don Mario," based on Goldoni's farce.

LETTERS TO THE TIMES.

Santa Monica vs. San Pedro. LOS ANGELES, March 9, 1894.—(To the Editor.) There has been a great deal said and written during the past two years relative to the location of a deep-sea harbor at some point on the coast of Southern California, and several rival towns are now contending for an appropriation of money by Congress for their particular location.

The principal contestants are San Pedro and Santa Monica. Let us, as a business proposition, review the ground from a business standpoint, and for the best interests of the most prosperous city today on the Pacific Coast—Los Angeles. It does seem to me that the interests of the whole people would be best subserved by the location of said harbor at the nearest practicable point to Los Angeles, regardless of any selfish motives or any particular railroad corporations. We need not care for them. They will regulate their own business. We are not interested in their fights. Let us get the harbor located as near this great and growing city as possible, and the railroads will come to that point. There seems to be but one argument in this case, and that centered in Santa Monica, where we can combine business with pleasure. How can an unprejudiced mind say that it is better for Los Angeles to have this harbor located at a point one-third greater distance, and where the communication to San Francisco is three hours longer time from her business center than at Santa Monica, a suburb of our beautiful city? We are told by some of our influential, public-spirited men that for them to use their energies now in this direction would be inconsistent with their former action, "Consistency, what a jewel!" Would it not be more inconsistent in the Southern Pacific Company in leaving San Pedro and expending their millions of dollars at Santa Monica? Do not circumstances call for such changes? What are the facts today regarding travel by rail from San Francisco to Los Angeles at 10 o'clock a.m., and for the same boat connection from Port Los Angeles you leave Los Angeles at 1:10 p.m., a difference in time of more than three hours. To connect with the same boat, you must leave Los Angeles at 1:10 p.m., a difference in time of more than three hours. To connect with the same boat, you must leave Los Angeles at 1:10 p.m., a difference in time of more than three hours. To connect with the same boat, you must leave Los Angeles at 1:10 p.m., a difference in time of more than three hours.

One of the most serious objections comes from the fact that the government engineers selected for the purpose of making an examination of the two points in question, reported in favor of San Pedro. At the same time, equally as competent engineers (not government engineers) have reported in favor of Santa Monica, and a million of dollars of private money has been spent on the strength of their report, in building one of the most substantial wharves ever constructed. This, of course, is charged to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company. There are other reasons why Santa Monica should be selected, and one of great importance, to-wit, delays in traffic, caused by washout of railroad tracks during the rainy season. I know of my own knowledge, in the past four years, that we were a whole week at one time cut off from railroad communication with San Pedro, while the Santa Monica line was open and operating regular trains during the time.

There would seem to be good reason for asking an appropriation for a harbor at Newport Landing, to accommodate Los Angeles, as at San Pedro. The two trans-Pacific lines of railroad are now centered at Santa Monica, and the third one, we trust, has its tracks already there, while San Pedro has but one, the Southern Pacific, which, however, is concentrating its efforts at Santa Monica. Private interest or local prejudice should not be allowed to control down the best interests of Los Angeles, and it seems to the writer the best interests of this city can best be served by joining hands with a solid and enterprising company, who, if the dispatches

The Car-routting Fight. LOS ANGELES, March 10.—(To the Editor of The Times.) Referring to an article in your issue of this date, in regard to the car-routting fight between the Riverside Fruit Exchange and the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe roads, I would say that, to one unimformed as to the workings of the exchange system, that report, as published, might be construed in such manner as to work against the best interests of the exchange movement.

The system agreed upon by the management, and by the term management I refer to the executive board, composed of a representative from each of the seven exchanges comprising the system, is as follows:

Where orders are accompanied with spot cash, routing to conform with buyer's directions explicitly. Where fruit is sold on thirty days' acceptance, and routing specified in order, the exchange shipping such order may conform with the wishes of the purchaser to the fullest extent consistent with their own protection.

Consequently, if, as stated, there are any differences at Riverside, it is simply between the Riverside Fruit Exchange individually and the roads, and not the Southern California Fruit Exchange.

Exchange shipments are moving via Union Pacific, Denver and Rio Grande, Santa Fe and Texas Pacific. Inquiry at Riverside, this date, shows Santa Fe, Rock Island and C. F. T. cars being loaded. Respectfully, E. C. KIMBELL.

The second week Mr. Carter's team scored 203 points to their opponents' 194. The third week Capt. Simpson's forces led by a score of 134 to 114 points, and on the closing night the Carter team scored 168 points to their opponents' 153, thereby winning the tournament.

oranges East Friday night, and a third car was started Saturday night. The association urges lemon-growers to take care of their crop, as the market for another crop will form on the trees this season, and prices must grow better. If lemons are picked and carefully put up they will keep until the market has improved.

Board of Trade Meeting—City Politics—Other Local Brevities.

SANTA MONICA, March 10.—(Special Correspondence.) There was a good attendance at the Board of Trade meeting Friday evening.

The leading issue, if it may be called, where the sentiment all surges one way, was the harbor. At a previous meeting the Board of Trade had adopted a resolution to be placed in the hands of California Congressmen and Senators, reciting Santa Monica's claims to consideration.

At the meeting, Roy Jones, as chairman, presented a somewhat lengthy report in which Santa Monica's claims were vigorously set forth, both affirmatively and comparatively. The report was well received and will be put in shape for use by the representatives of the State in Congress.

Among the points in favor of this harbor, the speaker stated, is the fact that the holding quality of the bottom of the bay—a factor whose importance has been repeatedly emphasized by the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey—has been repeatedly emphasized by the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey.

Before the meeting adjourned a committee was created to confer with and secure the co-operation of the various chambers of commerce. This committee consists of T. R. Owen, T. H. Wells and H. G. West.

The board also took up the subject of the proposed new school districts, and it developed that the position already taken by the board was in full accord with the sentiment of those present, namely, that the Malibu district seems desirable, but the Garfield district, which has been proposed, was thereupon appointed, consisting of Robert Eckert, T. P. Bonnell and M. H. Kimball, who were instructed to prepare a report on the subject.

More About that Big Orange Transaction.

The Sale an Advantageous One to the Association—The Baseball Game at Los Angeles. Today's Notes and Personalities.

SANTA ANA, March 10.—(Special Correspondence.) The Santa Ana Baseball Club has daubed itself all over with war paint, preparatory to going to Los Angeles Sunday, to meet the Keatinges on the diamond in Athletic Park, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

The club is very strong now, and unless a calamity befalls them are likely to have another victory perched upon their banner when they return from the southern metropolis.

In all probability the Santa Ana club will entertain the Pomona club on its local diamond next Saturday afternoon. If this game is arranged for local fans will have the pleasure of seeing Strong, the old Los Angeles "phenom" of 1892, do the twirling.

MORE ABOUT THAT BIG FRUIT SALE.

The sale of the crop of oranges of the Santa Ana Growers' Association to the Earl Fruit Company, mention of which was made in Saturday's Times, was an important topic of conversation on the streets in Santa Ana today.

At first, the action of the association, in placing its whole crop in the hands of its acknowledged enemy, was looked upon by a number of orange-growers as a piece of short-sighted policy on the part of the association.

But when more of the details of the transaction were known, and it was considered a wise disposition of the crop, and one which will, just at this time, greatly benefit the growers of this particular section, the action has been deemed the association does not lose its individuality and still does business at the old stand, the Earl Fruit Company, agreeing to take the fruit in carload lots at association prices, which will be fixed once a week. The sale, as it becomes better understood, seems to be giving general satisfaction among the local orange men.

The Philadelphia Times, one of the staunchest champions of the Democratic party, says:

"The conspicuous result of the present Congress thus far is an impressive lesson given to the American people that the Democratic party is unfit to govern the Republic. It has politicians large and small, but mostly small, while statesmanship seems to have become a lost art in the councils of that organization. It is now more than six months since Congress met, and it is a thing that Amelia Still Believes in Polygamy, and Expounds the Situation Like a Statesman—The List of Living Wives, etc.

SALT LAKE CITY (Utah), March 5, 1894.—(Special Correspondence. Copyright, 1894.) In the "Junior Gardo," a handsome and comfortable two-story house at No. 6 South First West street, in Salt Lake City, resides Amelia Folsom Young, seventeenth and favorite wife of the greatest of Mormon prophets, Brigham Young. It was on a cold winter day of this new year that I called on the former queen of Mormon society, and through the courtesy of President George Q. Cannon, of the Mormon church, from whom I bore a letter of introduction, was granted an audience. An interview is almost as difficult to obtain from Mrs. Brigham Young XVII, as from the President of the United States, as she is daily being besieged by curious tourists, both in person and by letter, and when admitted these morbid curiosity seekers always subject their hostess to humiliating and often insulting questions and comments. After a short conversation with Mrs. Young, it was easy for me to believe that she had been the most popular of Brigham's Young's nineteen wives. She is tall and symmetrical of form, dignified and graceful of manner, and a brilliant conversationalist. The silvery locks which tell of the fifty and five years of her eventful life, are mingled with threads of gold, reminiscent of the beauty of former years, and the large blue eyes have lost nothing of their fire and expressiveness. After a short conversation with Mrs. Young, it was easy for me to believe that she had been the most popular of Brigham's Young's nineteen wives. The silvery locks which tell of the fifty and five years of her eventful life, are mingled with threads of gold, reminiscent of the beauty of former years, and the large blue eyes have lost nothing of their fire and expressiveness. Mrs. Young told me that she had never before submitted to an interview from a representative of the press. She was aware that many unauthentic and untrue newspaper articles had been published about herself and her late husband, and it was to correct the false impression conveyed in these stories that she was now willing to talk to the public.

Harriet Amelia Folsom was born August 23, 1838, in Buffalo, N. Y., the birthplace, also, of Frances Folsom, now Mrs. Cleveland. A near relative of Mrs. Young, who has taken some interest in the genealogy of the family, says that Mrs. Cleveland and Amelia Folsom-Young are cousins, having sprung from the same original Folsom family in New Hampshire. Mrs. Young, when approached on the subject, desired not to talk, stating that she had no knowledge of just what kinship, if any, she bears to Mrs. Cleveland, never having looked up her genealogy with any such object in view, but a Massachusetts member of the Folsom family, having traced their genealogy, says the two famous women are second cousins.

The Mormon church was a religious infant when Amelia Folsom was born, and it was not until she was 3 years of age that her parents embraced the new faith of Joseph Smith, another New Yorker. In 1846 the Folsom family moved to Nauvoo, Ill., the site of the first Mormon temple, but were not permitted to remain there long, the people having risen up against the Mormons, killing their prophet, Joseph Smith, and driving all his followers out of the State. The Folsom family went to Keokuk, Iowa, and early in 1860 started across the plains for Salt Lake, the Mormon city of Zion. Amelia Folsom was then 22 years of age, and in full bloom of her beauty, while Brigham was 38. Beautiful women were not plentiful in this then desert valley, the number of men greatly predominating in the small settlements. The President Brigham Young of the Mormon church and his first presidential counselor, Heber C. Kimball, rich and powerful, were in the habit of going out to meet incoming parties of pilgrims, and upon learning of the approach of the party in which the Folsom family came westward, set out to meet them and welcome them to the Mormon stronghold. Here was the beginning of the romance which was consummated in the marriage of Brigham Young and Amelia Folsom. It seems to have been a well-established case of love at first sight. The reader may now listen to Amelia Folsom-Young as she tells, for the first time in her life, her own story of her associations and experiences with Brigham Young.

"When did you first meet President Young?" I asked.

"It was on October 3, 1860, when in company with Heber Kimball, he came out into the Salt Lake Valley in a carriage to meet and welcome our party. I was introduced to him, and after arriving here, he called on us. The call was returned, and we subsequently visited back and forth frequently, and went to social gatherings together."

"When did your courtship begin?" "Immediately after my arrival in Salt Lake."

"How long did it last?" "Until August, 1862, when we were engaged. In January, 1863, the marriage occurred."

"Did President Young employ peculiar methods of courtship?" "I think not. I was aware that he was the husband of a number of wives—I did not care to know how many—but that did not affect our courtship in the least. President Young was naturally dignified, but, but was always at ease with company."

"Did you take up immediate residence with your husband?" "No. I remained at home three weeks, when I took up residence at the Lion House, President Young's home. His wives and children all lived there, and each wife, including myself, had her separate room. At that time there were seventy-five of us in the family, including the hired help. We all dined at the same table, over which President Young presided. Every morning and evening all gathered in the large parlors for prayers, and here also President Young presided. I afterward took up quarters at the Beehive House, but returned to the Lion House later and remained there until the death of President Young, August 29, 1877."

"Was your married life generally happy?" "I should certainly dislike to think otherwise. Why not? We were all members of the same family, and treated each other as such. I would sacrifice anything for the surviving wives of President Young, and their feeling toward me I think is the same."

"How many times did your husband marry after you became his wife?" "Twice afterward. I don't know how many times before. His will should show that."

"Where did you reside after your husband's death?" "I went to the Gardo House. This building had been begun before President Young's death. I planned the structure myself. I also planned this residence. I now live in, which was built in 1879, and I moved into this house the same year. All of President Young's wives were treated alike in the distribution of the estate."

"You have the name of being Brigham Young's favorite wife?" "I can't say that he had any favorites. He was equally kind and attentive to all in his lifetime, and left each surviving wife an equal legacy. I was absent from home at long intervals during the fifteen years of my married life, having visited several times in the East, and having taken an extensive tour of Europe."

"Do you still believe in polygamy?" "Certainly I do. If polygamy was once right, it is still right. There is no reason why a polygamous marriage may not be as happy as the ordinary marriage, if it is entered into understandingly."

"What will be the future of the Mormon church on this question?" "The same as in the past, so far as belief in the doctrine of polygamy is concerned. As to its practice, that has been declared unlawful by the government, and the Mormon people have promised to abstain from polygamy. They will keep their promise, but they can believe in the doctrine of polygamy without practicing it. It would not be right under the 'manifesto' to practice polygamy."

"The abolition of polygamy, then, will not affect the strength of the church?" "Not in the least. Aside from polygamy, the doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints are not radically different from that of other religious bodies. There is no reason why the church should not continue to grow in strength. The recent election clearly demonstrated the fact that the Mormon people believe in the separation of church and State, and certainly there is no indication of any desire on the part of the church to dictate the politics of its membership. The ill-feeling that has heretofore existed toward the Mormon church is fast dying out, and the people of Utah are learning to treat the Mormons as any other religious body. As old prejudices disappear, the good work of the Mormon church becomes apparent. Through the tithing-house this church distributes more goods to the poor each year than any other church organization, the amount in Salt Lake alone being $100,000 annually. Homes are built up, and co-operation practiced with beneficial results. The misrepresentation of the past is being supplanted by the truths of the present, which fact points to a bright future for the church."

Gardo House.

"You have no children?" "I regret to say I have none. I am constantly sensible to the fact that children would have been an inestimable source of comfort and company to me at the present time. I am living alone here, though visits back and forth with the surviving wives of President Young add great pleasure to my home life."

"How many of President Young's widows are now living?" "There are nine of us, and named in order are as follows: Zina D. Young, Emily Partridge Young, Harriet B. Young, Harriet Cook Young, Nanna C. T. Young, Margaret P. Young, Lucy B. Young, Eliza B. Young and myself. We all held a reunion on Thanksgiving day, at the residence of one of President Young's granddaughters in this city."

Amelia Folsom Young appears but seldom in public since the death of her husband, but is not on this account a recluse. She is still as popular in the private gatherings of the older Mormon society circles as she once was in the public events occurring in the younger circles.

Has a Competitor. A new competitor of the silkworm has been found on the Balkan coast, according to a report of a French entomologist. This is the bombyx lasiocampa. The moth of this is similar to that of the silkworm, but the cocoon is much larger, and the silk finer and snow white. The worm feeds on the leaves of the evergreen oak, and its excrement is being made with the intent of raising this newly-discovered worm for commercial purposes.

There are a great many pathetic pictures in life that the world at large never sees, never dreams of. If we could take in the whole life of Los Angeles for a single day, even, we should find many a phase of existence such as has never come into our thoughts.

How many of the readers of a great daily paper know anything of the lives of the newsboys, the little waifs of civilization who serve them from day to day alike in sunshine and storm? And yet there is pathos in the story of every one of those lives.

In fancy, just drop in with me, dear reader, into the basement of the Times Building in the early morning, say at about four, before the shadows of the night have lifted and the great world of humanity is fully active. The wheels of the big press are a-whirl, and the mighty pulse-beats of the engine that give life and motion are heard. The pressroom has a wing extending underneath the sidewalk, and here the steam-engine is placed whose power is imparted to the great press, which leaps at its touch like a great giant to action.

There is a hard cement floor in this apartment beneath the sidewalk, and the room is warm at this morning hour and the floor itself becomes heated, and what a tempting bed it furnishes to the shivering waifs outside who gather before the morning light in waiting for their papers. Peil-mell they rush down the dark stairway into the pressroom and creep into the spot where they may find warmth, and the chill of the morning is forgotten.

Sleep there, do they? Yes, on that hard, stone floor, for it is not cold. There's a little gurgle of content from one poor little fellow as he cuddles up with a companion, near to the fire. "This yer is bully," says another, as he tucks his old felt hat underneath his head for a pillow. Little Tim is fast asleep already, with his tiny head covered with soft brown curls. His father was drunk at home, and quarrelsome, and Tim did not have a good night's rest, but here he feels safe. Other little bits of shavers are there whose tiny forms should be tucked snugly into their trundle-beds by a loving mother's hand. But the mother, perhaps, is gone, sleeping her last sleep, or, what is worse, she is dead to all good and to the love of her little ones. But the father? Go to the saloon, or the gambling hell, and there perhaps you may find him. Or maybe that he is dead, and the orphan has to do for himself. An uncle, or some relative, gives him the shelter that he calls home, but withholds that which is more needed, love and tender care, and proper training.

Or here is one: A brave little chap, whose mother is a widow, and there are other small mouths to feed besides his own, and he takes up life's burden cheerfully in order that he may help "mother." What a noble boy, and his comrades, all like him and call him a "brick," which is the very highest term of praise in their vocabulary.

Sometimes a part of the boys will expend almost the whole night on the floor in the engine-room. They are rollicking boys, most of them, and just as soon as they are warm and comfortable the fun breaks out among them. Laughter seems spontaneous. They do not brood over life's discomforts, but, like wise young philosophers, they make the most of the present. The amusing stories they can tell! The laughter-provoking conundrums! The comical speeches and jokes that they perpetrate! They far outshine the circus clown or Mark Twain's oratory. There are genuine Bill Nyes among them, and Tom Thumbs, and Artemus Wards, and now and then a philosophic Milton. They are rich in street-lore and sidewalk slang. They are mostly good-natured and big-hearted, and always tender to a comrade in distress.

After they fall asleep, what a picture they make—those newsboys of ours. There are black heads and brown; boys with flaxen locks and eyes like the blue of heaven, pale cheeks and rosy ones, boys of all shades of complexion, from the fair-haired German to the swarthy-cheeked son of Ham, but they are all democratic and share with delight their unaristocratic bed on the floor of the room where the engine throbs with its passing hours. Ah, I tell you, it is hard to be a boy and uncared for. To have life's big, heavy burdens dropped upon your shoulders when they are weak and all unfitted for them. How they will ache sometimes, and the heart grow hard and despairing as the years go by, and darker shadows gather, and heavier ones are laid upon them.

Speaking of these waifs makes one think of the Whittier boys. I went Wednesday evening to Music Hall to listen to Dr. Lindley's address and hear the music rendered by these little cadets. While I was there I studied the faces of the boys, and I was surprised to find how many noble faces (I use the adjective advisedly) there were among them, and the Saunterer is satisfied that those boys are not any worse than other boys, but they are simply the victims of cruel circumstances.

I want to tell you something that I had upon authority last week that furnishes, to my mind, the reason why two Los Angeles boys, brothers they are, were sent to Whittier, and which led me to give my pity and my sympathy wholly to those boys. I was told the story of their home life. Their mother is a Southern woman, their father is dead. The mother was not trained to work, and she has no love for it. Her home is the picture of disorder and untidiness. She is fond of gossiping with her neighbors, and when her boys were with her she would often spend her afternoons and evenings among those of her class, leaving her boys to come home in the evening to find no welcome, no lamp lighted, no supper cooked, and often they would sit down in the cheerless place and make their suppers of whatever scraps of cold food they could find. One of her boys was working, as she thought, for too small wages, and so she took him away from his employment. He could find nothing else to do, and therefore he was left to loaf about the streets. The education of the sidewalk was his, and his companionship was with the hobo and the loafer. When the brothers went to bed the same spirit of disorder followed them. There was no clean linen, no soft, white pillows to tell of a mother's thoughtful care. The children had no sheets to sleep in, and half the time they threw themselves upon the untidy bed without removing their garments.

What wonder that with such a home the boys went astray? The home life was without beauty or tenderness. There was nothing in it to lift them up, nothing to inspire them. Their young natures grew warped, the beauty of life was hid from them by their mother. Poor boys! I do not throw the blame of your mistakes upon you, and my heart goes out to you with pity. You merit my sympathy, and not my blame. The blame I put upon your mother's shoulders, she who should have made home your delight, who should have given you the music of pleasant words, the brightness of the cheerful fireside, the loving welcome home at night, and the well-spread table with its tempting fare for your hungry lips. She should have given you books and companionship, and that blessed love and counsel that is like a wall between the child and temptation. Without these, what child is not in danger of wrongdoing?

I thought of all this as I looked at those Whittier boys the other night—what manly-looking boys there are among them—and I said as Mrs. Lindley, of blessed memory, once said of them, "They are not bad boys," but they are the victims of relentless circumstances, and I rejoice that at last they have been committed to the care and superintendence of a man of royal sympathies and clear-sighted philanthropy, who, putting their past behind them, is willing to give them a chance to begin life anew, and is ready to help them to make it noble.

A half-hour in some of the studios of our artists is always delightful. There are some who have always the breezy freshness of nature about their pictures. I dropped one day last week into the rotunda of the Bryson Block to see the pictures which Mr. Eugene Torrey had on exhibition there. There was one which represented a field of California poppies, yellow as gold. I almost felt as if I might pluck a handful of those poppies. And behind them, in the background, was a line of purple mountains which looked like a real bit of nature. I was dreaming over another picture—just a dream of enchantment. It was "Evening in the San Fernando Valley." The artist has stolen some of nature's own tints. There was the sunset glory; the old mission, the sweep of plains; the white dusty road, and the calm sky brooding over all.

"A Fisher Girl" appealed to me, as she stood prominent in the foreground of the picture. She was a lovely, Normandy maiden, with light brown tresses and sweet young face, with the faintest touch of care. The basket, filled with fish, rested against her side as it was held in place by her extended arm, with the hand clasping its further side. The sky was filled with a light, scudding gray mist. There was the sea in the background, and the white beat of the waves upon the shore, and quiet brooding elsewhere.

"Adios," would catch the eye, for it is a bit from real life as it was found here in early days and is still found in the land of the Aztecs. There are the walls of the quaint old church, the gay crowd of lovely señoritas, waiting the coming of the bride as she passes down the path from the church leaning upon the arm of her newly-made husband. There is life in the picture, and action, and gladness. How we like the old, old story wherever we find it, and we love to read it, whether written by poet's pen or the brush of the artist. And there was another picture, which was one of peace—"Evening in the Fields, Normandy"—which seems to hold the soul of the day as it is dying into twilight. The tints of the swift-coming twilight have been caught and put upon the canvas, at the pretty maiden leaning against the fence is dreaming her own dreams as if she felt her kinship with earth and sky and all things fair.

Mr. Torrey has published a little volume, containing ten etchings of the old missions, which will help to perpetuate these monuments of a dead past. The artist is wise who makes a study of these landmarks of our history.

The business of the past week at the theaters is conclusive evidence that, whatever may be the state of affairs in other sections of the country, when ever an attraction comes along that the people of Los Angeles want to see, enough of them to pack the houses have no difficulty in getting funds together for the purpose.

The Calhoun Opera Company did a splendid business, and, as a rule, the performance was satisfactory. While none of its leading people displayed exceptional talent, either as singers or actors, they were sufficiently accomplished to round out the ensemble and afford that pleasurable sensation which the sound of music and the movement of the limbo forms of shapely chorus women, gives to a theatrical audience.

So long as the organization does not go outside the domain of light opera it is all right, but when it essays singing the comparatively heavy music of such creations as Balfe's "Bohemian Girl" it staggers under the load. "The Black Hussar" and "Said Pasha" were given with real dash and spirit, the catchy and somewhat frivolous airs of Millocher and Stahl are suited to the capacity of the troupe, as is the atmosphere of the production.

In the "Mikado," an equally light and breezy skit, they were much of a disappointment, more, perhaps, because it was a comedy, and the audience and because the work of carrying the leading parts was left to the heavy undertones, who, judging by the performance of Wednesday afternoon, will never be anything more than undertones.

As a whole, however, considering the fact that operatic companies are having a hard road to travel through the troublous times, the season was a success; when it is so hard to get, the theater-goer will be compelled to put up with plain bread and butter, and not much of that.

"The Black Crook" did a great business also. The organization contains few clever people, and the show is, mainly, a good one. If the management could suppress the matter of the merry little maiden, who can dance but can't sing, and would incoherently utter the funniest words, whose witless outbursts are a tremendous bore, then out of about nine-tenths of the Black Crook's lines, and let the ballet and the spectacle do the business, it would be still better. The French dancing women, who do undecorous things with apparent decorum, their juvenile copyists, the various ballets, particularly the one of the tumbler from the Bowery, the acrobats and the eccentric tumbler were all first-class features of their kind, and they saved the show.

The irrepressible conflict between the woman with the high hair and the man behind her has broken out afresh, hereabouts, and the sufferers are rushing about in their usual tales of woe to which they would not add, as she, says about as much head as she usually does to walls of this sort.

The second of the two, who is down the millinery, money-making, except for the theatrical attaches to confiscate it at the door, or, if the offending hat-wearer refuses to yield her crown of colored rage, to refuse her admission—that of course hits the management's pocket, and there you are. There are two other ways to stop this nuisance of big hats.

Let the man in the box office retain one double row of seats, tandem, through the middle of the theater, and the hat fends, then when they come up in the lobby let the usher seat them in this partition row with the ladies behind each other, no matter what their seat checks call for. In front of the forward woman let the house set a millinery man wearing the biggest cart-wheel in town, and then let nature take its course. Or:

Let every man confronted by a pile of ribbons and hats go to the box office and demand his money back. Either of these plans will settle the hat question, and it is a question that should be settled, as the man who pays his money has a right to see the performance, and no selfish and perverse bit of calico topped out in feathers and furbelows should be permitted to keep him from seeing it.

Down with the high hat!

Tomorrow evening at the Los Angeles Theater Clay Clement will open an engagement, during which he will present, for the first time in this city, "The New Dominion," a refined comedy, which is reported to have made a distinct hit through the northern portions of the State, and "The Belle," the famous tragedy in which Henry Irving made his first great success in London nearly twenty years ago. Both plays are entirely new to the players of this city.

"The New Dominion" presents Mr. Clement in the character of a German nobleman, who falls in love with the daughter of a Southern gentleman, at whose mansion on the banks of the James River in Virginia the Baron is living. The war has ruined the master of the plantation, and a young roger who fancies he has a claim to the daughter seeks to marry her by force, closing on the estate, by virtue of a mortgage he has inherited. The Baron pays off the claim and sails for the fatherland, denying himself the gratification of his heart's desire, owing to the young girl's adherence to promises given her step-mother, who wishes to see her married to the mortgagee in order to lift the burden from the shoulders of the ruined planter. Finally the Baron returns on Christmas eve, and all ends happily.

As the Baron, Mr. Clement creates a part entirely new to the American stage. It is neither the enigma of Emmett, the vagabond of Joe Jefferson, nor the low-comedied impossibility of Gus Williams—types already familiar to American theater-goers. In the most unfortunate moments, whenever perplexed by the countrified yokels who cannot understand his apparent vanities, aroused to anger by the rude interferences of the young mortgagee, or embarrassed by the presence of the lady he loves, the Baron resorts to his native tongue. In this way many ludicrous situations are brought about. At all times, however, this university-bred German is courteous and amiable, even to those who do not deserve his respect.

"The Belle" is a striking contrast to Mr. Clement's new comedy. In the portrayal of an Alsatian burgomaster, haunted by the sound of the sleigh bells on the horses of a Polish Jew murdered by him twelve years before, Mr. Clement has made a lasting impression. If the press may be believed, during his two years' tour in the East, in the third act, where he dreams that under the influence of a mesmerist he re-enacts before a phantom court all the terrible details of his crime. Mr. Clement's acting is said to be most thrilling and realistic.

The play is a powerful one, and drawn on lines which have made it unique, not only as a stage presentation, but also as a psychological study. The company includes Charles Kent, for a long time leading man of the Boston Museum Stock Company, and since associated with Mr. Frohman's attractions; Hereward Hoyt, T. F. O'Malley, Keria Kenwyn, Bertha Folz, well known as a successful California actress; May Hillman and Ada Levick. It carries a carload of special scenery, which is new and handsome, and "The New Dominion" is underlined for Monday and Wednesday evenings, "The Belle" for Tuesday evening and the Wednesday matinee.

In New York there is a member of the theatrical profession who looks enough like Nat Goodwin to be his brother, and who delights in imitating him at Sunday evening benefits. Not long ago, at one of these entertainments, Goodwin happened in just as his prototype was doing his copy act. When he had finished Nat copied for the door, and as he was going into the chatty blazes, a friend clapped him on the back and said: "Well, Goodwin, what did you think of it?" "What I think of it," replied Nat. "Say, old man, either the imitator or the imitated is rank."

A Pittsburgh manager has had a new experience. An ambitious novice who came to the city to try his luck, was given a chance to try his luck on the public. Incomit to write to him: "I will come to your place at any hour you may designate, but my features concealed. I must be permitted to wear the mask on the stage and it will not be necessary for any one to address me when I am to go on. I have confidence in myself, but if I fail no one will be the wiser, and if I am successful, it will be time enough then to say who I am." The manager has accepted the conditions and now anxiously awaits the appearance of the unknown singer.

The Chicago Ledger offers $1000 in gold as a prize for the best comedy in the city, to be sent to the editor before May 1, 1894. The comedy must be domestic in character, occupy the stage for not less than half an hour and be limited to four persons. The right of production for six performances at one of the leading New York or Chicago theaters is reserved by the paper, after which the play reverts to and becomes the sole property of its author. As the idea is to encourage amateur talent as well as professional, a leading playwright has been retained to put productions which are not quite fitted for the boards in proper shape for acting. The dramatic merit of each piece submitted will thus figure largely in awarding the prize.

Incomit to write to him: "I will come to your place at any hour you may designate, but my features concealed. I must be permitted to wear the mask on the stage and it will not be necessary for any one to address me when I am to go on. I have confidence in myself, but if I fail no one will be the wiser, and if I am successful, it will be time enough then to say who I am." The manager has accepted the conditions and now anxiously awaits the appearance of the unknown singer.

The Chicago Ledger offers $1000 in gold as a prize for the best comedy in the city, to be sent to the editor before May 1, 1894. The comedy must be domestic in character, occupy the stage for not less than half an hour and be limited to four persons. The right of production for six performances at one of the leading New York or Chicago theaters is reserved by the paper, after which the play reverts to and becomes the sole property of its author. As the idea is to encourage amateur talent as well as professional, a leading playwright has been retained to put productions which are not quite fitted for the boards in proper shape for acting. The dramatic merit of each piece submitted will thus figure largely in awarding the prize.

At this point permit us to act as your guide, and to direct you to a stroll out to the Throop tract, corner Main and Jefferson streets. This property has been on the market only a short time, but time works wonders. We will not trouble you with details, but go out and look the ground over. say, so if you'll just excuse me a moment I'll prove to you that sometimes my deeds are better than my words." and to my great astonishment he withdrew, taking with him a richly ornamented pitcher which I had noticed standing rather conspicuously on the center-table.

No sooner had the door closed behind him than the young ladies burst into paeans of praise, declaring that of all their gentlemen friends who visited there were none to compare in elegance of diction, refinement of manner or quickness of repartee with Mr. Job Pincheck.

PINCHECK'S REFINED WAYS.
"And what I like most about him," exclaimed the elder Miss de Cay, "is that there's nothing common about him. Every action you see him make is refined. Just look how elegant he took the pitcher and stepped out. Not a word about chasing the duck or rolling the rock, nor any of them fearful low expressions."

"Yes, indeed," chimed in her sister, "it's easy to see that Mr. Pincheck's been used in good society. Very different from that Mr. Polkadot, who came here once or twice, and used such common slang terms that we were all mortified. Why, one night he was here, and we had two young lady friends visiting us. And what do you think he said? He turned to me as soon as you please and said: 'Let's get together 10 cents and push the can.' Well, I never was so ashamed in all my life. Just turned to him and said, 'very quiet and very sarcastic.' Mr. Polkadot, when the time comes that we have to use a pitcher for a pitcher of beer, I'll pass the hat myself. But it's very seldom any of our gentlemen friends call here without the price of a pint of beer in their pockets."

"Yes, and you ought to have seen the way Mame looked when she said it to him," exclaimed the elder Miss de Cay. "But you'll never hear a real gentleman like Mr. Pincheck say anything like that. With him, it's generally, 'perhaps these ladies will partake of some refreshments,' and then pour it out without making any remarks about the collar on it."

A PLAY FOR POSITION.
At this moment the subject of this glowing eulogy re-entered the parlor and placed on the center-table the pitcher, which was now full of beer. Glasses were produced by the younger Miss de Cay, and the cheering beverage was graciously and speedily served by the engaging Pincheck.

I now determined to establish myself by one bold coup in the esteem and affection of the family, and at which he began to run low, and finally ceased altogether. I arose, took my hat and the richly decorated pitcher and withdrew from the room, leaving a pleasant smile and a bow, which I felt sure must have their effect.

"Leave the door open so you can see, and mind the broken fall," called the younger Miss de Cay, as I groped my way down the dark staircase.

"I'll light a match!" exclaimed Mr. Pincheck, following me out into the hall and whispering: "On the middle of the block above; a little Dutch place across the street; you can't miss it. And while you're about it, you might as well get a quart; it'll last longer."

Following these instructions I found the "little Dutch place" indicated by Mr. Pincheck, had the pitcher filled to the brim with foaming beer and then bent my steps toward the De Cay tenement.

As I walked I reflected upon my good fortune in having, through my friend's kindness, obtained the entrée to a circle in which eluded all other refinement were the guiding stars. With the adorable Mr. Pincheck to copy and learn from I felt certain that in a very short time I should become a veritable ornament to the society into which I had been introduced.

A DISMAL FAILURE.
Occupied with these pleasant reflections I entered the dark hallway of the apartment house and began the tedious ascent to the third floor. I climbed slowly and paused for breath at the foot of the last flight. The door of the De Cay apartment was still open and the sound of voices reached my ears. And this is what I heard:

Mr. Pincheck. Well, I'm afraid it's no use trying to make a society man out of him. I've had him one or two before, but he didn't catch on at all. He just saved himself this time by going out for beer, but I don't think I'll try it with him again. The poor chap means well, but he hasn't got no style.

Elder Miss de Cay. Well, anyway, Mr. Pincheck, he did better than that fearful Polkadot, with his low, common expressions.

Younger Miss de Cay. Oh, mercy, not nothing like as awful as that man was. The only trouble with this one is that you can see at once he hasn't never been in no society to speak of. He ain't had the advantage of no society. Mr. Pincheck, and I'm sure if he was to go about offering with you he'd improve a great deal.

Mr. Pincheck. And I knew he was shaking his head sadly. No use, I'm afraid; he hasn't got society in his blood and he won't never be any good. Hush, here he comes up the stairs. (A moment later.) Well, old man, back again? Pretty tough climbing for a fat man like you. Just go to the glass and look at your cheeks.

Modern merchandising has made

CRITICAL BUYERS. EDUCATION IN THE art of shopping has made particular merchants, and particular merchants have advanced improved ideas to manufacturers. The display of faultless-fitting dresses upon the forms of women has been brought about by faultless-fitting Corsets. The Royal Worcester Corset is the leading American-made Corset. It was the first to improve on the French ideas, and they have always carried this idea out in Corset-making. Last week a representative of the Royal Worcester Corset Company came into the store and asked for criticisms and suggestions for the betterment of their goods. Every little detail was gone into. He was traveling from one end of the continent to other, and seeking from the leading merchants and their salesladies suggestions, and continues to better their line. He carried his note book in his pocket, and each merchant carrying the Royal Worcester line had his suggestions and criticisms noted down. This, in time, will be sent to the factory to be analyzed. In this way a comparison can be made, and great improvement may be expected shortly. They know they have the best Corset produced in America. They are not bigoted and surfeited with the idea that their corset cannot be improved. On the contrary, they are constantly on the lookout for suggestions to improve. In this way they will always take the lead. The French no longer lead. Pay the same price for the Royal Worcester that you do for any French Corset, and you get a better Corset in every way. Better materials, better fitting, more elastic, more style. Facts are stubborn things, and the way to prove this assertion is, buy a Royal Worcester, take it home and wear it. If not perfectly satisfactory, bring it back and get your money. Assertions like this, backed up by square treatment, have more than doubled our Corset trade the past year, and we sell none but the Royal Worcester Corset. Society ladies recommend the Royal Worcester; good dress-makers recommend the Royal Worcester. The prices range from $1 up. Any lady who can afford a Corset can buy a Royal Worcester, and she is sure of the worth of her money. It would be an infamy to our business to recommend the Royal Worcester so highly if we were not sure of every statement made. The sales of Royal Worcesters are constantly increasing, on the better grade.

Legitimate merchandising is the ONLY TRUE ROAD TO SUCCESS; THE MOST successful business men in the world have the highest regard for commercial honor. A merchant may deceive the public once; he is entitled to no credit for doing so; he at once places his business under the ban of criticism, and this impression lasts longer than it took him to make it. Honest, legitimate business methods win at all times and bring credit and prosperity to the merchant. Very few are critical judges of goods; they must, to a certain extent, rely upon the integrity of the salesmen, and this is where fine salesmanship comes in. If the employee is honest he will use honest methods to further the interests of the business; if he has dishonesty in him he will stultify himself—deceive the customer—and work an injury to the business. It don't pay either the salesman, the merchant, or the customer. We aim in the first place to use great care in selecting the right kind of help; if we fail in this it is only a question of time when they are found out—which means dismissal. We aim to purchase good goods, mark them at a legitimate profit, and sell them at the prices they are marked. No employee is allowed to hold out an idea that one customer is buying goods cheaper than another; no one can be favored under a legitimate business system; where so many people are employed, once in a while a salesman will take it upon himself to be smart at the expense of the business; almost invariably they are found out—yet the injury has been done and the merchant is alone the sufferer. We use the greatest care, watch every avenue, and aim to be on the alert, and it is very seldom we catch an overt act of this kind. We give good treatment; sell goods at a reasonable profit, and do the largest dry goods business in this city. Our Cloak Department is thoroughly reliable in every way; it is replete with new goods, and they are all sold at a fair square, legitimate profit. Moderate-priced goods; new Capes; new Jackets. We cut, fit and baste Capes free for all who buy their materials here, and carry fully 100 pieces of cloths to select from.

Carriage shades are better than ever; 75c, $1, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75, $2; the size, 12 inches—all black handles. Our Parasol stock contains none but new goods; the prices this season lower than ever; $1, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75, $2, for choice new styles in excellent goods.

A very large Bath Towel,

If there is one thing above another

THAT IS HAVING A LARGE SALE IT IS Laces, of every kind, quality and description. The latest European advices are that everything in the line of wearing apparel is being trimmed with lace. Large ribbon bows at the neck, trimmed in lace, is one of the great novelties of the season. The new Sans-gene and Alsatian Ties, also the lacroyable and Dicoire Bows, are having an immense run; everybody everywhere has taken up this craze, and it will soon be a novelty to see a lady on the street without one of these handsome throat ornaments. A hint: Lace collars are coming in again; all Paris has the rage. We have ribbons, silks and laces of every kind for these new neckwear ornaments. New, very new, extra large Windsor Ties, in plain and brocade, as well as hem-stitched; buy them; add a little lace to the ends; and then you will be in line with the multitude; 50c, 75c, $1, $1.25. BUSINESS.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

OFFICE OF THE TIMES.

LOS ANGELES, March 10, 1894.

Business continues steady at about the usual range of quotations. Butter and eggs are firm.

NEW YORK, March 10.—Share speculation was generally firm on a moderate volume of business, but buying was mainly to cover short contracts. Traders who did the bulk of today's business seemed anxious to close out their lines and there was a general disposition to take profits, especially sugar. There was a good demand for sugar common in opening dealings, and in the first fifteen minutes an advance of 3/4 cent. was recorded. Thereafter figures were mixed until a loss of 1/4 cent. had been made, leaving a gain of 1/4 cent. on the day. Sugar preferred advanced 1/2 cent. but lost the entire improvement. Burlington and Quincy gained 3/4 cent. but the other granaries are practically without change. Chicago, Louisville and New Albany preferred shared the decline of 1/4 cent. Kanawha and Michigan, 1/4 per cent. In the rest of the list transactions were light and changes were in the direction of higher prices. Speculation was weakest in later dealings and the market closed heavy. Government bonds closed firm.

ST. LOUIS, March 10.—Exports of specie from New York amounted to $229,478 in gold and $11,195 in silver. The total for the week was: Gold, $2,353,551; silver, $17,219.

NEW YORK, March 10.—The bank statement showed a reserve decrease of $16,000; loans, increase, $68,000; specie, decrease, $152,000; legal tenders, increase, $63,000; deposits, increase, $1,362,000.

The banks held $75,622,000 in excess of legal requirements.
